WILMER, B.C., THURSDAY, JULY 7, 1904.

The practical prospector is rapidly taking the place of the ignorant and the inexperienced. He has paid for his knowledge, not by years in the management of paying properties, but by years of loss mixed up with his gains, to indelibly impress his experience upon the mental faculties. It is a business to which few are adapted, and fewer still are successful. There is nothing in the business world that requires such a wide range of knowledge as that of mining and prospecting. The practical prospector of today understands every detail of the solfataric, dynamic and chemical factors most effective in the world's past periods of universal formation. He has learned that while heat, water and vapors have produced deposits in veins and otherwise, many of which have proven valuable, that the greater part of the great bonanzas of the world are always in connection with two of the six principle divisions of igneous or eruptive rocks—trachyte and telyte—the former generally lying in great fields and truncated masses, the latter in dikes and in overflows and older formations. These again have been divided into various characteristics, owing to the period of eruption or subsequent metamorphism, all of which have been instrumental in mineralizing the adjoining country rocks in veins and deposits. The secrets of the success of the modern prospector and mine manager lie in his knowledge of the dates and effects of the porphyry overflows and intrusions. The advance from prehistoric mining was slow, but is now coeval with all other industries and scientific attainments.—Mining and Scientific Press.

After you get real angry and stop your paper, just poke your finger into water, pull it out and look at the hole; then you will know how sadly you are misled. A man who thinks a paper cannot thrive without his support ought to get off and stay a while. When he comes back half his friends will not know he has gone and half will not care, while the world at large kept no account of his movements. You will find things you cannot endorse in every paper. The Book of Books is often very plain and hits some hard raps; but if you were to get mad and burn your Bible, the hundreds of presses would still go on printing it. So when you stop your paper and call the editor names, the paper will still be published; and what is more, you will read it on the fly.

Good fuse is absolutely essential for successful mining work. A poor quality of fuse will cause more misfires than the saving in price of such an inferior material over good fuse is worth. This same remark applies also to the choice of an improper class of fuse, e.g., if a double tape fuse is used in damp ground, misfires are apt to be very common. A misfire always causes a delay in approaching to the face or causes men to be more careful in the picking down of the broken material; miners are somewhat timid in drilling into ground where an unlocated misfire is known to have occurred. It also causes a delay when the hole has to be recharged and fired again. It is a poor policy to economize in the fuse department, and it is better as a rule to use a higher grade of fuse, when there is the least doubt regarding the quality, i.e., double tape fuse should never be used where the ground is damp, it is better to use triple tape. It is a poor idea, also, to use two different grades of fuse in a mine, that is to say double tape fuse in the dry workings and triple tape in the wet workings. It is almost inevitable that these fuses will become mixed and misfire will be caused.—Denver Mining Reporter.

A very interesting discovery has been made in the Etruscan necropolis of Tarquinia. It consists of a corner of modern shape, 3,000 years old. Two hundred tombs containing helmets, a breastplate of gold, amulets, vases, etc., have been opened, showing the Etruscan civilization was far superior to that of the Romans. The collection will be offered for sale after the Italian government has appropriated one-fourth of it under the law.

The system of identification by finger-prints proves to be not so new as we have supposed. A London clergyman

Rev. Mr. Collyer, was missionary in Korea for some years, and he reports that the Koreans—a sharp-witted people, by the way—have long made use of finger-prints in the deeds for the sale of slaves. He has been able to trace the practice, back, in fact, for 1,200 years. The slaves are all women, and each is required to place her hand upon the sheet of paper on which the deed is written, the outline of the fingers and thumb being traced, after which an ink impression of each of the fingers is taken.

The reappearance of sharks in the Baltic Sea, after an absence of 150 years is causing much speculation among naturalists. One explanation is that the fishes have been led to return by the recent unusual climatic conditions. Another guess is that the configuration of the bottom of the sea has been changed by earthquakes, and that this may have forced the sharks to abandon their later haunts and take refuge in their earlier homes.

TIMBER IN RIVER BEDS.

Portland Await the Invention of a Method to Remove It.

"If some scheme could be devised," said a Milwaukee (Milwaukee) man, "by which the timber logs which fill the beds of rivers and creeks in the logging sections of this country could only be recovered, incalculable fortunes would be made. Along the St. Croix waters it is estimated that there are enough logs to keep mills running for years. Under presented conditions the loss is total, for no successful effort has ever been devised to effect their recovery."

"Occasionally logs cut years ago are forced by the windings of floods from their mud beds and driven upon the shores, where the action of sun and wind dries them out sufficiently so that they will float down stream, but the percentage of logs recovered is small, and millions of dollars' worth of property is lost beyond recovery until some enterprising genius invents a machine or process to recover the timber."

At Stillwater logs occasionally come to the surface, but they are not recovered until a century ago, and when they appear the old lumbermen grow resistant of men who have been long forgotten, but who were important operators in the pioneer logging days of Wisconsin and Minnesota.

"No possible estimate can be made of the amount of timber thus lost, but the timber is not lost, even after it has been submerged for half or quarter of a century. Efforts have been occasionally made to recover sunken logs, but the plan did not work with any great degree of success, this method being found too expensive. Some one will come along some day with a plan and this immensely valuable product will be recovered."

Brain.

The brain is an important organ, serving as it does to keep the body from collapsing. Almost all styles of clothing, for a head of some sort. As a rule, there is nothing like a head to set off a fine neck. Finally, we should feel rather foolish without our heads.

For a long time scientists were unable to discover why it is that the brain is divided into white and gray matter.
It remained for a clever French savant to solve the difficulty.

"Quite likely," said he, "the hard cells had not yet come in when man was created."

Psychology deals with the original impulse of thought. To psychology we owe the knowledge that calf's brains hunger good soup.

Sir Colin Campbell's Commission.

When the Duke of Wellington was in India he "discovered" the soldier who afterward became Sir Colin Campbell.
That dashing warrior was in the military service and had volunteered for an assault on a hill fort. The duke saw a little round man run up a ladder and, seeing a pile of shot at the foot, he ran down like a ball in the bottom. He was, however, up again in an instant and, running up a ladder, he was the first to enter the fort in the place.

The duke laughed, inquired about him and procured him a commission.

Whittier's Safeguard.

inevitable from so many doors open-strive gently to restore confidence by pointing that most of them were locked at night.

GETTING IN THE WALNUTS.

An Industry That Closes California Country Schools.

The first English walnut orchard in California was planted with seed from the Los Angeles mission gardens, where the padres had started a few trees with nuts brought with them from Spain.
The undertaking was a success from the first, and the acreage of walnuts has steadily increased. The walnut tree's early age of bearing, its long life and the steady demand for its product tend to make the enterprise diversely popular.

The walnut tree begins to bear when six or seven years old, and nothing is known definitely of its age limit of bearing. Fabulous stories are told of trees in Spain one or two centuries old bearing enormous crops. The oldest trees in California are still bearing, but collections from the short history already made show that the tree is in its prime from its twenty-fifth to its thirtieth year. Five hundred pounds of nuts to the acre is a good average yield, making seventy-five pounds the average weight from one tree.

The best time to begin about the middle of September and lasts nearly six weeks. The nuts begin to fall with the leaves, and the perfect cultivation under the trees leaves no chance for them to lose themselves among clods or weeds. The brown dead leaves show like the nuts. Under normal conditions they drop free from the outer husk, or hull, through its irregular burning, and grading the nuts picked up is a simple matter. Sometimes the trees are well irrigated just before harvest time to insure the clean dropping of the nuts.

Boys and girls, men and women, Japanese and Chinese, are all possessed here service, and on lands and across the great orchards are gone over, not once, but several times, on account of the in-regular ripening of the nuts. The trees are occasionally shaken during this season to loosen the nuts, and before the shaking they are "puffed" to start the very early ones. This is done by long, coarse bamboo poles, whose light weight makes them easily handled.

In certain rural districts the public schools close regularly for a "walnut vacation." The help of the children is needed, and the children are obliged to help to separate their discolored purses. Park, camp and game lands are centered among the fields, and when the boys are full they are carried to the pigging grounds, where they are spread out on mat strips to dry - re-

Delphine Leased

J. Beatty, who arrived a short time ago from West Kootenay, was successful in obtaining a lease on the Delphine mine, situated on Toby creek, the deal being completed on Monday. Mr. Beatty was foreman at this property about five years ago and, therefore, has a thorough knowledge of the ground, and expects to make it pay well. He is now preparing to start work with four or five men and will increase the force as rapidly as possible, and will ship down ore as it is taken out. The Delphine is a high grade silver mine, from which a number of carloads of ore have been shipped at various times, netting big smelter returns, save a shipment made last year when the ore got mixed with a low grade ore in transit, owing to the sack not being marked, and thus the shippers lost money.

WAYS TO ADVERTISE.

The Wise Man May Easily See Which Is the Best Method.

If you have goods to sell, advertise. Hire a man with a hand-luck bottle and a brush to paint your name and number on all the railroad fences. The cars go whizzing by so fast that no one can read them, to be sure, but perhaps the obliging conductor would stop the train to accommodate an inquisitive passenger.

Have your card in the hotel register by all means. Strangers stopping at hotels for a night generally buy a cigar or two before they leave town, and they need some inspiring literary food besides.

If an advertising agent wants your business advertised in a fancy frame at the depot, pay him about 200 per cent more than it is worth and let him put it there. When a man has three-quarters of a second in which to catch a train he invariably stops to read depot advertisements, and your card might take his eye.

Of course the street thermometer dodge is excellent. When a man's fingers and ears are freezing or he is puffing and "pneuming" at the heat is the time above all others when he reads an advertisement.

Have thousands of little droplets printed and hire a few boys to distribute them. You've no idea how the junk dealer and paper and rag man will respect you.

A boy with a big placard on a pole is an interesting object on the street and lends a dignified air to your establishment. Hire about two.

Advertise on a calendar. People never look at a calendar on any other day of the month it is. They merely glance hurriedly at it so as to be sure that your date is spelled with or without a "y," that's all.

But don't think of advertising in a well established, legitimate newspaper. Not for a moment. No advertisement would be nicely printed and would find its way into all the tariff households of the nation, where are the farmer, the mechanic, the tradesman in other lines and into the families of the wealthy and refined, all who have time and money with which to buy them, and it would be read and perused, and people would come down to your store and patronize you and keep coming in increasing numbers, and you might have to hire an extra clerk or two, move into a larger building and more favorable location and do a bigger business, but of course it would be more expensive and bring greater profits.

For Their Stomachs' sake.

Sunday school treats must come round often in England than in the United States, for the dean of Bristol has included in his book, "Dicks and Drakes," many stories of the hold of such festivities on the juvenile heart and stomach.

The hand of a small boy wavered for an instant over a pile of cakes before he took one. "Thank," he said, after his momentary hesitation, "I'm sure I can manage it if I stand up."

Another boy, still smaller, who had studied systematically, at last turned to his mother and sighed: "Carry me home, mother, but, oh, don't lead me!" The average boy in Yorkshire knows why he attends these feasts and does not wish being furnished forth scantily. A sufficient cause suggested only, as was glowering mysteriously. "Have you had a good tea?" the curate asked. "No," said the boy, in an aggrieved tone, laying his hand on his diaphragm. "It don't hurt me yet."

Dicks and Drakes.

A schoolboy in Javel City, Mo., was assigned to prepare an essay on the subject of "Dicks," and this is what he wrote: "The dick is a low, heavy set bird, composed mostly of meat and feathers. He is a mighty poor singer, having a hoarse voice caused by getting so many frogs in his neck. He likes the water, and carries a log about in his stomach to keep him from sinking. The dick has two legs, and they are set so far back on his running gear by nature that she comes pretty near losing his body. Some ducks when they get big have cuts on their tails and are called drakes. Drakes don't have to set or hatch, but just loaf, go swimming and eat. If I was to be a dick, I'd rather be a drake every time."

If Was Just Possible.

"I don't understand," said Mrs. Yennemother, "why it is that baby won't go to sleep. Here I have been sitting and singing to him for the last hour, and yet he keeps crying and seems just as wide awake as ever."

"Well," said her husband thoughtfully, "I don't know, of course, but perhaps I am wrong, but it may be that baby has a musical ear."

Where Man and Dog Differ.

"Dodger in a dog makes him valuable, doesn't it?"

What's Funny?

"Why, it's my experience that polio makes a man pretty darn near worthless."

Few Prayers.

Yenn-Naw, if all men would vote as they pray this would truly be a happy world. Darn—but if that should ever happen you wouldn't get the average man to the polls once in ten years.

Their Good Offices.

"I see they're advertising twenty-five cent lunches. What do they give you?"

An appetite for your dinner?
